The US has imposed sanctions on Iran – will your business feel the impact?

As the United States begins to explore re-imposing sanctions on Iran as part of its withdrawal from the nuclear deal, we are standing by to help with any implications that may arise.

We have worked with a number of firms in the past who have been unexpectedly affected by sanctions imposed by foreign governments and helped them to understand the impact it may have on their business.

This includes recently acting in an international oil sanctions arbitration involving Iranian sanctions, during which they successfully represented the claimant leading to an Award of more than $50m in its favour.

Businesses both large and small are likely to be affected by the sanctions, with concerns already emerging for a deal by manufacturer Airbus to sell nearly 100 of its airliners to the Middle Eastern state.

Regardless of the politics behind the US withdrawal from the Iran nuclear deal, there will be companies around the world who fear the worst about the re-imposition of sanctions.

It is important that those likely to be affected seek professional advice immediately, as there may be workable solutions to the changes or action that can be taken if their business is impacted.

Disputes between organisations or individuals based in different countries require specialist legal support to deal with the complex issues which result from multiple jurisdictions.

Our Dispute Resolution team has wide-ranging experience of cross-border disputes and international arbitration.

We offer specialised dispute resolution and litigation lawyers, with considerable experience, acting for national and international corporations. We have experience working with a range of arbitration rules, with particular expertise in LCIA and International Centre for Settlement of Investment Disputes (ICSID).

In fact, in 2016 we were named Arbitration Law Firm of the Year.

Our team speak a number of languages, including Arabic, Cantonese, English, French, German, Gujarati, Hindi, Italian, Punjabi and Spanish and Swahili, so can help a variety of companies from jurisdictions around the world.
